

Hanyang International Summer School

Faculty Information	Name	Lyong Choi
	E-mail	choiu2@hanyang.ac.kr
	Home University	Hanyang University
	Department	Asia-Pacific Research Center
	Homepage
Course Information	Class No.		Course Code	DIS2005	Credits	3
	Course Name	International Relations
	Lecture Schedule	Mon-Thu /
	Course Description	This course offers an overview of the theoretical and empirical discussion on International Relations. This course will construct the foundation of scholarly and policy analysis on the current issues of IR. The topics covered will help a student have a fair amount of methodological and theoretical training. We will cover a range of topics – mainstream and major IR schools, regimes, international security, war and peace, and international economy.
	Course Objective	This course is considered a gateway course for all other international relations classes and a fundamental element of the undergraduate. The aim is for students to begin to learn the literature in the field and the intellectual issues and debates. In each class, there will be two sections. 1) There will be a lecture section. In this section, the lecturer provides his own analysis on the given readings and explanation for the issues. And students are supposed to answer to the question from the lecturer once her/his name is called. (Cold Call) The list of questions will be provided in advance. If the students give a 'proper' answer to the question, she/he will gain a point for the in-class participation. Readings other than course text book will be provided. 2) A second section will be class presentation for assigned topic for discussion (about 20 minutes for each presentation, 15 mins presentation + 5 mins discussion and Q&amp;A).
	Prerequisite	-
	Materials/Textbooks	Bruce Bueno De Mesquita, Principles of International Politics (5 th edition) (CQ Press, 2013)
	Evaluation	Attendance	10%	Quiz	%
Assignment		%	Mid-term Exam	30%
Presentation		%	Final Exam	40%

	Group Project		%	Participation	20%
	Etc.		Evaluation Item		Ratio
					%
Daily Lecture Plan	Week 1	Day 1	Orientation
		Day 2	Ch1: Overview of World Politics
		Day 3	Ch2: Historical context
		Day 4	Ch3: Realism/Neo-Realism
	Week 2	Day 1	Ch4: Liberalism/ Marxism/ Constructivism
		Day 2	Ch5: Neo-Liberalism (Institutionalism)
		Day 3	Ch6: Domestic politics and IR (Selectorate/ Two Level Game Theory)
		Day 4	Midterm Exam
	Week 3	Day 1	Ch7: International Regime
		Day 2	Ch8: Poverty and International Development
		Day 3	Ch9 : War and Peace
		Day 4	Ch10: Nuclear Proliferation and Arms Control
	Week 4	Day 1	Ch11: Terrorism
		Day 2	Ch12: International Economy
		Day 3	Ch13: Soft Power and Summary
		Day 4	Final Exam		